SAFETY ADVISORY GROUP

Our Clients

Katten oversees a Safety Advisory Group designed for in-house safety professionals who work on health and safety, process safety, and risk management matters. Most of the member companies come from the energy, refining, petrochemical and other process industries.

Our Services

Katten's Safety Advisory Group helps organizations keep current with changing safety best practices. As a forum for members to discuss topics of interest and benchmark safety efforts with similarly situated organizations, we host quarterly half-day meetings where our attorneys address emerging issues and provide practical advice on how companies may want to address issues of concern. Government officials and technical subject matter experts also serve as featured speakers to unite the differing perspectives of legal counsel and safety experts across industries and disciplines. By helping organizations share information across industries, we ensure that in-house safety attorneys and subject matter experts consider both the legal and technical aspects of safety performance.
